The inn was patronized by northern tourists in the winter, and was a favorite meeting place for southern convicts in summer. The Young People's Missionary Movement, the Southern Christian Endeavor society, and the Southern Students' conference had been booked there for the coming summer.

UP AGAIN FOR HEARING.
Former Senator Judson and George L. Fox Principal Speakers.

Hartford, April 12.—The corrupt practices act came up again for a hearing before the legislative committee on the judiciary and the principal speakers of the afternoon were former Senator Stiles Judson and the author of the measure, George L. Fox of New Haven. Mr. Judson was the first speaker and announced that he ap act which has at present on the statute books. He said that he desired to correct the general impression which prevailed that the act was unconstitutional and that it is only so in minor details which can be changed by amendments. He said that from the very nature of the case there could be no finding under the bill as it is at present, and the judges had that in mind when they announced that they could not make a finding in the case against George L. Lilley. He then explained the workings of the law to the committee.

plained that he had done his best as a layman and explained to the committee how he thought they would work out. He then offered to meet Mr. Anderson and aid him in any way that he could to get a strong, effective measure put before the legislature.

The formation of the cabinet, although it is not composed according to general expectations, has greatly relieved the tension of the last thirty-six hours. The majority of the peo-troops have returned to their barracks and the crowds in the Stamboul quarter have retired to their homes.

During the whole thrilling, momentous episode, the salient features of the revolution were the loyalty of the troops and the people to the sultan, whose name was frequently acclaimed, and the absence of attacks on the lives and property of citizens.

PRESIDENT IN NEW YORK.

New York, April 14.—President Taft on the way to New Haven to attend a meeting of the Yale corporation, tomorrow, stopped over in New York tonight as the guest of his brother, Henry W. Taft, and with Mrs. Taft and a number of relatives attended a performance of "If I Were King," given by E. H. Sothern at Daly's theater. The president, very fond of the theater, and, according to friends, never absent from an afternoon, will again stop in New York to attend an evening performance be-

The president's trip from Washington was without incident. He traveled in a private car attached to the regular New York express of the Pennsylvania railroad. The trip was a half holiday for the president, and he thoroughly enjoyed the rest.
